The Hundred Flowers Project PREVIEWS BEGIN TOMORROW!

Christopher Chen's award-winning new work, The Hundred Flowers Project, follows a group of Asian American actors collaborating to create a play about Mao Tse Tung and the Chinese Cultural Revolution. Although the project begins under the utopian guise of generating a new theatrical work, as the actors delve deeper into the history of the Revolution, it soon becomes clear that someone—or something—is taking control of the play.

WATCH director Joanie Schultz discuss the themes and main ideas of the play (featuring photographs from the World Premiere production at Crowded Fire Theatre in San Francisco).

Join us for the Midwest Premiere of what the San Francisco Bay Guardian called "an Orwellian tour de force"—The Hundred Flowers Project!
