Novid Parsi's Through the Elevated Line "is a masterful update of a masterpiece" (The Hawk Chicago).

CHICAGO READER

Inspired by A Streetcar Named Desire, the script has been updated "for our present, brutish moment" (Chicago Reader).

The script "is absolutely superb... with all the kick-in-the-kidneys emotional wallop of the original story" (Picture This Post).

It is a "beautifully realized... breathtakingly good" production (Time Out Chicago), "directed with a pulsating ferocity by Carin Silkaitis and a cast to match its intensity" (Arts Alive).

"There is something undeniably powerful about the play... it is brilliant" (Chicago On Stage).

Come enjoy Through the Elevated Line, a "captivating new play, enjoying a stellar world premiere at Silk Road Rising" (Chicago Theatre Reviews).

“The play is asking people to think about what is happening right now in our country in terms of how we look at immigrants, foreigners, and ourselves.”

— Playwright Novid Parsi

In this video, playwright Novid Parsi speaks about the inspiration behind the play, how immigrants are typically cast either as the freeloader or hard worker, and when Parsi saw the parallels to A Streetcar Named Desire. Watch the video here >>
